

A Brief History of the Rise and Fall of the Ancient Order of Free Gardeners

By Trevor Powell (PM)

1. Introduction

Brethren, this talk was prompted by a visit to Melbourne when I saw an insignia showing a similar arrangement to our own square and compasses.

It was placed above a door in Elizabeth Street in the Northern end of the CBD. I was intrigued, and on another visit to Melbourne tried to find the same place to take a photograph. Unfortunately I couldn't find it again, for reasons which will sadly become apparent during this talk.

On investigation the insignia was shown to represent the Free Gardeners organisation and I determined to find out some more about this organisation which I hope you find interesting.

Interestingly enough there is a reference to the Free Gardeners in the Lord of the Rings by Tolkein:

"The one small garden of a free gardener was all his need and due, not a garden swollen to a realm; his own hands to use, not the hands of others to command."

Samwise Gamgee, The Lord of the Rings, Part III, p. 206.

History of Everyday Life in Scotland, 1800 to 1900 Graeme Morton,2010-08-31 This volume explores the experience of everyday life in Scotland over two centuries characterised by political religious and intellectual change and ferment It shows how the extraordinary impinged on the ordinary and reveals people s anxieties joys comforts passions hopes and fears It also aims to provide a measure of how the impact of change varied from place to place The authors draw on a wide range of primary and secondary sources including the material survivals of daily life in town and country and on the history of government religion ideas painting literature and architecture As B S Gregory has put it everyday history is an endeavour that seeks to identify and integrate everything all relevant material social political and cultural data that permits the fullest possible reconstruction of ordinary life experiences in all their varied complexity as they are formed and transformed

The Respectability of Late Victorian Workers Charles Walter Masters, 2010-09-13 This study of the working classes of York in the late Victorian period places respectability at the heart of the interpretation of working class culture drawing attention to its distinctive role within working class daily life while eschewing a class based analysis Through an investigation of workers actions choice making and personal testimony and using a wide range of textual and non textual sources a picture is produced of what it meant to be respectable in working class communities and respectability s role in personal and community identity formation Not only is the importance of gender based notions of the male breadwinner and female homemaker explored but fresh light is cast on how respectability was engaged with and negotiated in everyday contexts Respectability is shown to be a dynamic and culturally creative process with workers building their identities within the confines of structural constraints including street and neighbourhood based mores and institutions but with a measure of self generated cultural social and organisational space Far from respectability being a function of socio economic differentiation even the poorest are shown to have aspired to join self help organisations and become worthy citizens Crucially working class respectability is shown to have been moral and Christian in character underpinned by a form of diffusive Christianity that was robust and vital rather than some kind of legacy cultural and religious phenomenon Although different attributes of respectability could be prioritised within working class circles respectability is seen as a distinctive and essentially pan class culture centred on a set of universal values which distinguished and defined the respectable citizen and separated him from imagined or real rough Others This study will appeal to readers interested in social and cultural history gender studies and material culture York inhabitants are given their own voice through hitherto unpublished as well as published oral and written testimony Worker and family attitudes are analysed in the everyday contexts of work home neighbourhood and leisure and as part of the wide ranging discussion attention is paid to the cultural significance of what working people ate and wore and what goods they bought to furnish their often very modest homes The emphasis throughout is on a grass roots analysis showing clearly how and why respectability answered the needs and aspirations of most ordinary Victorian and Edwardian workers and their families
